Esther Morgan on What Women Want:

“Myra Schneider's spirited new pamphlet focuses on the importance of getting things done – poems written, laws changed, the past confronted and challenged. While many of the poems record the terrible injustices suffered by women throughout history, they are also a passionate call to action. Humming with Wordsworth's “force which rolls through all things” (quoted in her poem Croptorne Church) Schneider has faith in the power of words to affect change ... It's refreshing to read a collection that argues, in the face of continuing oppression, that poetry really can make something happen.”
